Joyabaj is a community full of valleys, mountains and water sources. First, the coffee cherries are washed, followed by a selection process that eliminates floaters. Next, they undergo fermentation with the husk for 18 hours, then are depulped and dried in a solar dryer on African Beds. The Joyabaj wet mill operation opened in 2021 and is centrally located and easily accessible. FECCEG provides local producer communities assistance in improving and expanding production, maintaining premium coffee quality and offering technical assistance to grow high-yielding organic crops. The Joyabaj wet mill produces parchment, natural and honey processed coffee that is transported to FECCEG's dry mill in Quetzaltenango for processing and export. The farms are organized by each family since they own their own plots of land and use family labor.

CUPPING NOTES: Medium Acidity, Silky Body, Blueberry, Lemongrass, Butterscotch, Beautifully Complex Coffee.
